Shortly before the close very the individual transactions running from 1,000 to 6,000 shares, and lifting the stock 2 ints. During the early part of the day, while the general market was strong, the steel and copper stocks were weak. The steel stocks showed a disposition to rally, especially Steel and Wire, which got above it at one time. The stock closed unchanged. Amalgamated Copper was very heavily sold and late in the day fell to 34%, and closed with a net loss of %. The general reaction in the market was not accomby any unfavorable development in the neral conditions, but was due to the disapintment of some speculative expectations. the principal of these was that the day's Lon-

NOVEMBER CORN WENT TO FIFTY. ONE CENTS AT CHICAGO.

Wheat and Oats Dull-Provisions Quiet with Small Net Changes.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 .- November corn estabished a new high record to-day, and closed le over yesterday. December, at the close, was %6%c lower. December wheat, depressed by cables and a report of the Czar's death, closed %@4c down. Cats, at the close, were a shade up, and provisions unchanged to 24c down. November corn, with Phillips still in control, and shorts trying in every way to get No. 2 to deliver to him before the close, next Friday, was the feature on the board to-day, and, while not spectacular, was fairly active. For November delivery, corn sold between 49@51c, and closed ic higher at 50c. Private elevators delivered 90,000 bu of contract grade, and of the receipts, 927 cars, but 57 were graded contract. Contract stocks, for the week, 1,151,000 bu, show an increase of 461,000. It was reported that shorts had ordered No. 2 corn previously shipped to Buffalo and Montreal to be shipped back here by fast freight. The report had no effect on the market, as it is doubtful that the corn can be brought here in time for delivery Friday. Phillips sold about 200,000 bu during price fell %c. December sold between 36%@36%c and 35%c, and closed %@%c down at 36c.

Wheat was dull and inactive. The market opened weak, with December %c lower at 70%@ 70%c, on weak cables, but rallied later to 70%@ 70%c, on reports of damages to the crop in the 76%c, on reports of damages to the crop in the Southwest. A report that the Czar had died influenced considerable seiling near the end of the session, and December dropped sharply to 76%c. The close was weak, %@%c lower at 76%c. There was considerable changing of December for May at 3%c difference. A scarcity of news, due to trouble with telegraph wires, again interfered with business. Seaboard clearances, in wheat and flour, were equal to 431,000 bu. Primary receipts aggregated 784,000 bu, compared with 563,000 last Tuesday. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 594 cars, against 485 lis and Duluth reported 594 cars, against 485 last week and 947 a year ago. Local receipts were 182 cars, none of contract grade.

There was little change in the monotonous situation in oats. Receipts were 206 cars. De-cember sold between 21%c and 21%@22c, and losed a shade up at 21%c. Provisions were easy early, on a heavy f hogs, but rallied later on buying by an uary pork sold between $12.05 and $12.271/2. unchanged at $12.20; January lard be-$6.62½ and $6.90, closing 2½c lower at and January ribs between $6.30@6.32½ and $6.371/2, with the close a shade down at

"Are you there?" he calls out. "Present," answers A, and then B strikes with all his strength. And so the game goes on, and the fun waxes fast and furious as the two men squirm on the floor, cautiously stalking and prospecting, delivering mightly blows amid the loud applause of the assembled concourse, and then lying still, awaiting the enemy's attack in The rules of Jap fighting are not hard and fast

A Too-Quotable Work. Philadelphia Press. Novelists should take heed before adopting titles from the Rubalyat. The present ascendancy of the Omar Khayyan cult makes it almost certain that every possible title in Fitzgerald's wondrous translation has been noted for use by a dozen writers already, and, perhaps, used in some way by one or more. Lately a young man engaged in writing fiction in Philadelpha thought of calling his novel "The Moving Finger" in consequence of the appropriateness of a certain well-known stanza of the Rubalyat beginning "the Moving Finger writes, and, having ginning "the Moving Finger writes, and, having writ, moves on." He mentioned the matter to a friend who also dabbles in fiction, and the friend exclaimed, "Why, how curious, I have used that identical stanza as the motto on the title page of my manuscript which I have just sent to the publisher." That evening he took up Henry Seton Merriman's latest novel, "The Isle of Unrest," and there was the first chapter entitled "The Moving Finger," and the whole stanza quoted at the head of the chapter. Then he rescived to beware of that particular quatrain, and thought nothing more about it until a week and thought nothing more about it until a week ago, when along came Grace Denio Litchfield's new novel flaunting the title "The Moving Finger Writes." Now he is on the lookout to see how many writers will use "Snow in the Des-ert," another Rubaiyat suggestion. The name of Baroness Von Hutten's new novel, "Marr'd in the Making," is also an Omarian title. A Mean Remark.

The man Grace Estelle is soon to marry is unuestionably one of the ugliest men in town. 'hat, however, is not a matter of any imcortance whatever, for he is good and kind and wealthy, and as he isn't a woman, nobody holds his lack of personal pulchritude against him. Grace Estelle loves him just as dearly as if he were Antinous or Apollo; or a matinee hero, but as she says herself there is no call for people to say as hateful things as Isabel said when she heard of the engagement, and she will never speak to Isabel again as long as she lives. They met at Babbie's at luncheon, and Grace Estelle tidied her back hair with her left hand, till Isabel saw the new ring glittering on it, and made inquiries. Grace Estelle blushed. "Yes," she said. "I am going to be married."
"Who to?" asked Isabel—nobody outside of Boston or a book ever said "to whom?" "To Mr. Elimore," answered Grace Estelle, "Mr. Ellmore!" echoed Isabel. "Mr. Ellmore!

An Hinstration.

Washington Post. They had the words "visit" and visitation" in the reading lesson of the class, which a friend of mine teaches, the other day. Nearly every little girl in the class knew quite well what means, but they were a little at sea when it came to "visitation." "Now," said the teacher, "I want you to tell me what you think it means. It is something more serious, more awful than visit. I don't want to tell you what it means until you tell me what you think it means. What do you think, Anna?" Anna looked a little doubtful, but plucking up courage on the teacher's hint, she spoke:
"I know what 'visit' means," she said. "That's like when Cousin Jack comes to see us, and visitation-well, when Aunt Jane comes, I guese that's a visitation.
